Rockwell Collins Receives Contract from Electronics Corporation of India Ltd for Communications and Navigation Components

Rockwell Collins has received a contract from Electronics Corporation of India Ltd (ECIL) to supply communications and navigation components for radios being indigenously manufactured by ECIL for Indian defense forces. Rockwell Collins has received a contract from Electronics Corporation of India Ltd (ECIL) to supply communications and navigation components for radios being indigenously manufactured by ECIL for Indian defense forces.

These components supplied by Rockwell Collins are used for integration into digital V/UHF radio, an IP-enabled state-of-the-art transceiver for ship to ship, ship to shore and ground to air communications.

The recent award is part of a long-term agreement signed with ECIL in 2010. To date, Rockwell Collins has delivered more than 1,000 units to ECIL said Sunil Raina, managing director, India, for Rockwell Collins.
